Adrian Martinez is a keynote speaker, law enforcement leader, and educator whose work centers on leadership, resilience, identity, and the impact we have on others.

With more than 15 years of experience in law enforcement, Adrian has served in roles spanning patrol, investigations, training, supervision, and organizational leadership. He currently serves as a captain with a Midwestern state law enforcement agency.

Adrian holds a Ph.D. in criminal justice and teaches undergraduate and graduate courses at several colleges and universities. His combination of personal experience, professional leadership, and education allows him to connect with audiences through vulnerability, humor, and real-world perspective.

Through Refuse to Be the Statistic, Adrian challenges audiences to recognize that while our experiences may shape us, they do not have to define who we become, and that the way we show up for others can have an impact far beyond what we may ever realize.
